DRAKE'S

TLE GIANT POST, Patented Oct. 15, 1872, by A. B. DRAKE, Clay Center, Kas.

Letter A represents a post, which has the iron rod B inserted at its feet, and thence extending perpendicularly downward to a sufficient length to secure a hold in the ground, where the said rod is bent at a right-angle and is extended thence norizontally as far as necessarry to secure the required firmness, and then it is bent apward at an scute angle to connect with the upper portion of the post A, and forms a firm base therewith, as shown in the cni. If deemed necessary, a stone or black of wood, or other substance, may be placed upon the horizontal portion of thered, or the excavation may be partly filled with cement. The posts or setting will be found to stand with unusual firmness and permanence.

Which the severe Frosts Will not effect in the least,

Fonce posts used in connection with this improved setting may be made much lighter than usual, and the improvement is admirably adapted to various other uses besides fencing.
